Out of the Past

May 2, 1896

Hugh McLaren has recently transformed his livery business into one of the neatest institutions of the sort in this part of the Upper Peninsula. The barn has been treated to a coat of whitewash throughout which adds greatly to the appearance of the premises and sundry improvements have been made to the appointments of the place. In the way of additional equipment, McLaren recently added an elegant hearse. His driving stock is superb and in every way more than able to meet all demands. Ad: Livery, Sale, exchange and boarding stables; any manner of service in the business at the most reasonable rates. Contract and day teaming is just our line. Our Motto: Horses the best, turnouts the newest, prices the lowest. (128 Superior).

A theory has been advanced in a medical journal that kissing, once the object of much medical dispute, is an altogether wholesome and healthy exercise. Instead of being avoided, as being fraught with bacteriological menace, it is to be encouraged as one of the best of all experiences for the human system. Kissing persons encounter only the beneficial organisms and the advantages of kissing far outweigh its infinitesimal risk.
