Out of the Past

June 16, 1960

If anyone has ideas about stealing any Bosch beer from local beer distributor's John "Skipper" Anesi's truck they will have to contend with one of his security team. "Tarzan" the Anesi's bulldog family pet is a permanent fixture who rides in style in the back of his delivery vehicle when Skipper is making the rounds to local establishments supplying them the Houghton brewed nectar.

With the upcoming Italian vs Swedes softball contest and Tressa West's Fat vs Lean game fans should familiarize themselves with the official "Slow Pitch" rules. The pitcher must deliver the ball at a moderate speed with an underhand sweep that sends the ball in a perceptible arch of at least two feet that does not carry the ball higher than ten feet from the ground. The batter will be out if he bunts or chops the ball downward. Except for the fact that the women will pitch from a distance of only 38', all other rules are identical to those used in a regular or "fast pitch" game.

THEFT INSURANCE — Bosch Beer distributor John Anesi doesn't have to worry about theft insurance premiums — he has substantial coverage in the form shown above. The bulldog is a household pet of the Anesi family but abandons the homefires on weekdays to ride shotgun for master John when he restocks the local pubs. The dog may look like he's sleeping in the photo above, but he wasn't. Moments before he had the menacing look that only bulldogs are capable of for the photographer who was trying to get as close as possible for the photo. (Drill Photo)
