Out of the Past

December 32, 1925

During recent bad weather several of the Crystal Falls grocery and provision stores has brought back their horses and sleighs to make deliveries around the area. The necessity of keeping horses for emergency delivery is an added expense to the merchants. It is not expensive to keep the horses during the summer pasture months but after the approach of the winter season stabling and feeding the animals costs increases considerably.

Charles Schutz, Triangle Ranch manager, reports the loss by fire of the bungalow at Barn No.4. The caretaker and family that resided at the structure have been transferred to the main headquarters for the winter. The work crew has to go back and forth to the barn, quite an undertaking when considering that the barn is about two miles from the headquarters and the snow is deep.

Michigan College of Mines, Houghton, is moving forward with plans to diversify research and instruction into the iron ore mining industry. The College, founded in 1885, has in the past almost exclusively dealt with the copper mining and production industry.
