Out of the Past

July 25, 1896

A new coat of paint has been administered to the interior along with several other improvements and upgrades have been made to the Post Office. Postmaster William J. Tully's salary has been increased by $100 per year. (222 Superior)

A Russian medical man has determined that the human eye naturally winks three or four times less often when reading by electric light than when a candle is used.

Judging by the rate at which inventors are busying themselves for saving domestic labor, there will be little left for the housemaid to do. "Housemaid's knee" will be a thing of the past and floor scrubbing of the future is to be done by machinery. In the course of time the scrubber machine will undoubtedly be connected to an electric motor.
